

An aerial photograph of a beach. The left side shows deep blue ocean water. A white, foamy wave is breaking and moving towards the right, creating a textured, lace-like pattern of white foam against the darker water. The right side of the image is a sandy beach, appearing in warm, golden-brown tones. The overall composition is vertical, with the wave acting as a central element that separates the water from the land.

Ah... The Beach

We love boundaries.

It is pleasant to live in...

...a cottage at the beach

...a ranch on the plains in front of the foothills

...a suburban home, and easy commute to the city

We love boundaries because we find opportunities there.
Especially, we like wide fuzzy boundaries.

<https://pixabay.com/photos/sea-ocean-blue-water-wave-nature-2562563/>

Modernism

. . . encourages us to live in a house built on top of a waterfall.

Modernism encourages us to feel that. . .

- 1.) Nature real.
- 2.) Nature exists in an orderly, lawful, rational, beautiful pattern.
- 3.) Nature is outside us but approachable. We are masters of it.

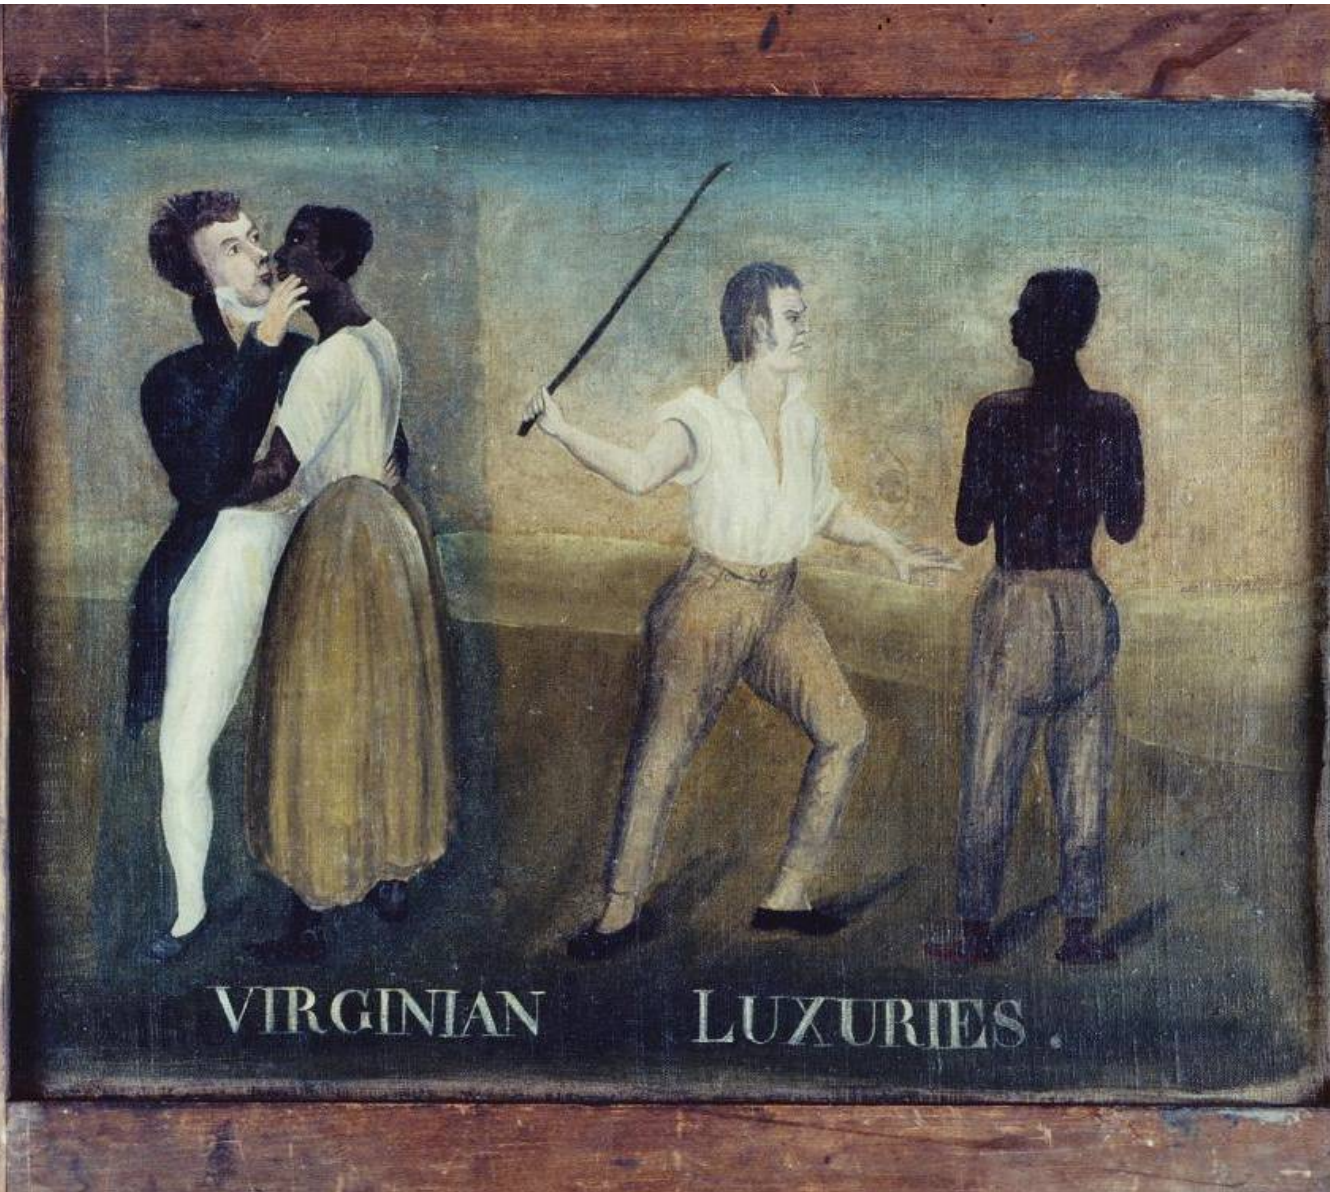

Post-Modernism

. . . to work in an office that puts the diversity of the city at your feet.

Post-modernism encourages us to feel that . . .

- 1.) The universe is infinitely diverse.
- 2.) The universe is mysterious. There are many ways of knowing it. Many stories surround every aspect, all valid.
- 3.) The universe is worth exploring because we are of the universe.

Critical (Racial) Theory

... to live in a fractured world with historic social boundaries, obscured yet eternally always present.

Critical (Racial) Theory makes us feel. . .

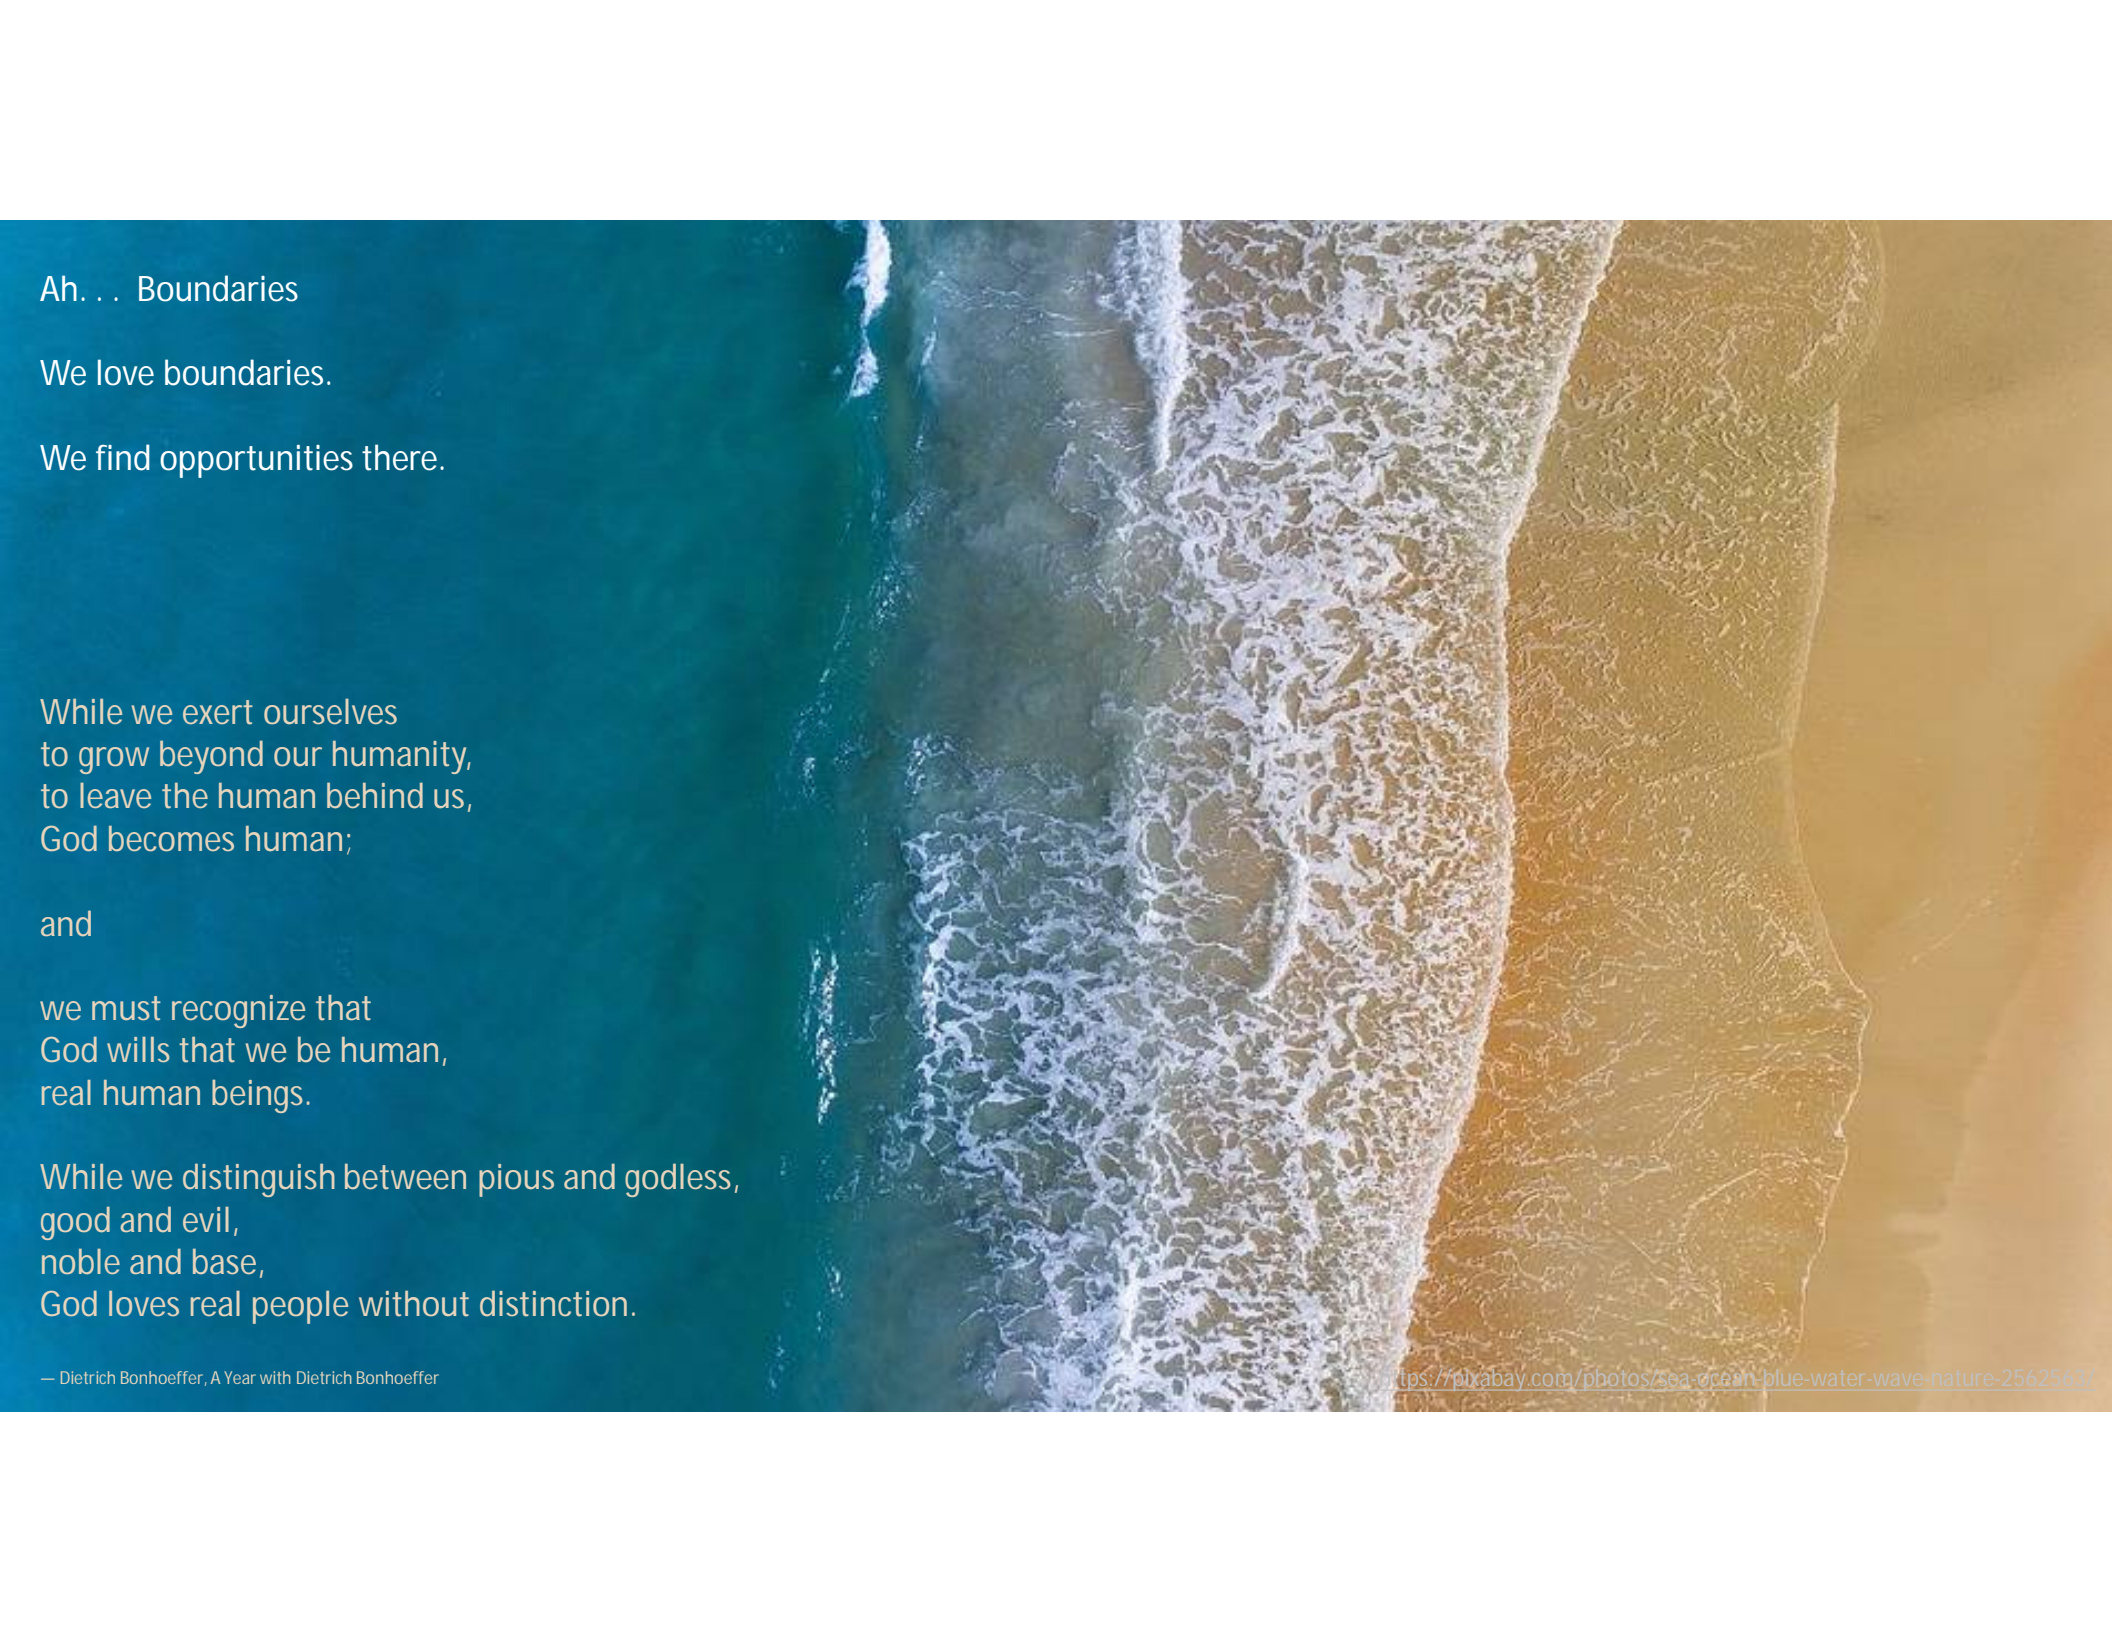

- 1.) The universe is no more real than as it is defined by those in power.
- 2.) Reason is unreliable. The universe cannot possibly be fully understood.
- 3.) The universe needs to be deconstructed and reconstructed.

"Virginian Luxuries" is in the Public Domain

Ah. . .
Let's take our shoes off
Let's walk in the surf
Let's feel the sand squish between our toes.

So much beauty and goodness. . .
Did God really say that you may not eat the fruit?
You will not surely die!

An aerial photograph of a beach with waves crashing onto the shore. The water is a deep blue on the left, transitioning to white foam as it breaks, and finally to a golden-yellow sand on the right. The waves are moving from the top left towards the bottom right.

Ah. . . Boundaries

We love boundaries.

We find opportunities there.

While we exert ourselves
to grow beyond our humanity,
to leave the human behind us,
God becomes human;

and

we must recognize that God wills that we be human,
real human beings.

While we distinguish between pious and godless,
good and evil,
noble and base,
God loves real people without distinction.

— Dietrich Bonhoeffer, A Year with Dietrich Bonhoeffer

<https://pixabay.com/photos/sea-ocean-blue-water-wave-nature-2562563/>